

John Starr, AIA, LEED AP BD+C

John Starr is a principal and director of the Arts & Culture and Education practice areas at Lord Aeck Sargent (LAS), an Atlanta-based architecture and planning firm. He is responsible for setting the direction of the practice areas.

Starr joined LAS in 1991 after spending eight years with another large, Atlanta-based architecture and engineering firm. In addition to overseeing the practice areas, he is closely involved with some of their projects. His experience includes the College of Dental Medicine at Georgia Regents University, the Woodruff Arts Center Expansion (in collaboration with the Renzo Piano Building Workshop) and the Gwinnett Environmental & Heritage Center.

Starr earned a bachelor's degree in architecture with honors from Auburn University. He is a LEED-accredited professional and a member of the American Institute of Architects, the American Association of Museums, the Georgia Association of Museums & Galleries, the Southeastern Museums Conference and the Society for College and University Planners.

###

November 2013